writing, in a language that the person being questioned clearly understands, that the person's consent must be voluntary, that the voluntary consent authorizes the search even if the peace officer does not have probable cause to search, that the lawfulness of the search cannot be challenged in court if consent is given, and that the person has the right to refuse the request to search;

(4) After providing such advisement, a peace officer shall obtain voluntary written or recorded audio or video consent to the search;

- (5) The peace officer shall document whether the person from whom the search was requested provided written consent, if that consent was recorded by audio or video, or whether consent was denied, and the law enforcement agency will submit this data for compilation in the attorney general's vehicle stop report;
- (6) The peace officer shall not ask for consent when he or she has probable cause to conduct a search;

- (3) If a law enforcement agency fails to provide documentation to the attorney general that proves the agency's significant disproportions cannot be attributed to discriminatory policing, the agency shall be subject to review for a period of three years.
- (4) Documentation provided to the attorney general to analyze significant disproportions shall be made public to the extent permitted by law.
- (5) If a law enforcement agency subject to review shows a significant disproportion in its data after its first year under review and the attorney general's study determines that the law enforcement agency cannot show good-faith efforts to remedy the significant disproportion, the attorney general shall require changes in the agency's policies and practices, including techniques for identifying problem officers, requirements that an officer's ratios of disparity along with any mitigating circumstances be a part of the record used to evaluate promotions and reassignments, training of supervisors in the skills necessary to eliminate discriminatory policing, and increasing the quality and quantity of officer training related to discriminatory policing. The attorney general's office shall work with other state agencies to provide financial assistance and expertise to facilitate these changes.
- (6) If a law enforcement agency continues to show a significant disproportion in its data at the close of its three-year review period and the attorney general's study determines that the significant disproportion can be attributed in whole or in part to discriminatory policing, the attorney general shall evaluate whether the agency is making a good-faith effort to achieve nondiscriminatory policing. As a minimum penalty, the agency shall remain under review, with ongoing attorney general oversight, until such time as the attorney general determines that discriminatory policing is no longer a cause of the significant disproportion. As a maximum penalty, or after six years of review, the attorney general shall order that the governing body or jurisdiction that the law enforcement agency serves be required, from that point forward, to forfeit twenty-five percent of its annual general operating revenue received from fines, bond forfeitures, and court costs for traffic violations, including amended charges for any traffic violations. The forfeited amount shall be paid to the general revenue fund of the state of Missouri, to be designated as additional funds for the peace officers standards and training commission. This penalty shall continue until such time as the attorney general determines that discriminatory policing is no longer a cause of the significant proportion.
