I am definitely in favor of those who are incarcerated having the right to vote. I am also in favor of having oversight of jails and prisons. I think locking human beings up like animals is never rehabilitary, and I also think its very easy for someone to abuse a human who is incarcerated.

In a fair and just society, every citizen deserves the right to vote. After someone has served time in prison, it is best for them and for society at large to do everything possible to be restore the formerly incarcerated to full citizenship with a stake in their communities. If we truly have a “department of corrections” (and not merely a system of punishment and revenge) then it is our duty to restore voting rights to citizens on parole or probation.

I am aware of everything at goes on at these prisons and the prisoners. These prisons are not fit for anyone to live in them, they are over crowded, black mold in them, abusive to the prisoners and the C.Os.. I support these following House Bills, HB 790, HB 874, HB 603, HB 774, HB 729. These bills are to improve and make the Department of Corrections take responsibility of their actions. These bills will also give the inmates the right to vote after they get out of prison.

Nationwide, nearly 5 million people cannot vote because of a conviction in their past -- and more than 3/4 of them are NOT incarcerated, but living and working in their communities, paying taxes, but not having a say in their government. One in 19 African Americans of voting age is disenfranchised due to a felony - a rate 3.5 times that of non-African Americans. This is not right. Missouri has the chance to improve these numbers and strengthen our democracy by passing this bill. I fully support.

Hello, I whole heartedly support House Bill 790. It is extremely weird that the people who are in charge of our institutions have no problem with accepting the tax dollars of folks that are on probation and parole, but the moment those same people want to vote it's a problem. What sense does that make? EVERYONE should be allowed to vote. What happens in the courts should stay in the courts. Let's call this what it is, attacks of violence on a certain demographic and/or groups, right? Black folks, folks of color, white poor folks and folks with a disability. Just another way to keep folks down and behind in life. If you don't want probation and parolees to vote, then let's come up with a bill that states that they're exempt from paying any/all taxes.

Members of the House Corrections and Public Institutions Committee: My name is [Your Name], and I am writing today to express my strong support for HB 847, HB 790, and HB 617, which would restore voting rights to Missourians with felony convictions who have completed their time. These bills are not just about policy—they are about dignity, democracy, and justice. Tens of thousands of Missourians who have already served their sentences are still being punished by being denied the right to vote. These are our neighbors, our co-workers, our friends. They are contributing members of society who pay taxes, raise families, and give back to their communities—yet they are silenced at the ballot box. Denying these individuals a voice in our democracy only continues cycles of disenfranchisement and systemic inequity. It sends the message that redemption is not possible, that a person is forever marked by their past, no matter how they've rebuilt their lives. This is not the Missouri I believe in. Restoring voting rights affirms that every person deserves a second chance—and a say in the future of their state. Voting is a cornerstone of citizenship and community engagement. It's time to recognize the humanity and value of every Missourian who has paid their debt to society. I urge you to vote YES on HB 847, HB 790, and HB 617. It's time to restore the vote in Missouri and uphold the ideals of fairness, accountability, and democracy. Thank you for your time and consideration.

The United States are not united on their methods or philosophies on incarceration and voting rights. In Maine and Vermont, citizens never lose their right to vote, even while they are incarcerated. Florida, along with eight other states, removes the rights of felons and ex-felons to vote. Fourteen states and the District of Columbia restore voting rights immediately after release. Twenty-eight states, including Missouri, allow ex-felons to vote if they are no longer on parole, aka "off papers." Why does America not have a unified, federal law on voting rights for those who are or were incarcerated? Multiple barriers exist for those who have served their time, but many states are pursuing reform in voting laws. Between 1996 and 2008, 28 states passed new laws on felon voting rights. In 2015, Governor Steve Beshear (D) of our neighboring state Kentucky signed an executive order to automatically restore the right to vote and to hold public office to certain offenders. Unfortunately, the order was immediately reversed by incoming Governor Matt Bevin (R). Again, why does America not have a unified, federal law on voting rights for those who are/were incarcerated? It seems that America still embraces practices of the European empires of old. Inspired by the Greeks and Romans, Europe would transition to a legal system that believed in "civic deaths," where people who were found guilty of crimes would forfeit property, lose the ability to appear in court, and would not be allowed to vote. The English colonists brought with them to the newly seized America many practices, including felon disenfranchisement. Since the beginning of America, wealthy elites would attempt to suppress the political power of the lower classes. Long story short, white male owners of property (which included business, real estate, and slaves) established the system of voting. Throughout American history, the same class of men employed other white men to make sure that the no-income working class did not run away while the low-income working class did not form unions. Wealthy white men would remain in control of who could vote until ... well ... today. In 2001, the National Commission of Federal Election Reform "recommended" that all states allow felons to regain their right to vote immediately after completing their criminal sentences. However, according to The Sentencing Project, 6.1 million Americans were prohibited from voting in the 2016 presidential election due to laws that disenfranchised citizens convicted of felony offenses. The Prison Policy Initiative estimated in 2016 that 113,600 Missourians were not allowed to vote. While 113,600 votes might not have made a difference in the 2016 presidential election for Missouri, the U.S. Senate and governor elections could have had a different outcome. We can improve our democracy if we stop treating the "right to vote" as if it is a privilege. People who are incarcerated do not lose all of their rights. They retain the right of free speech, the freedom of religion, and are allowed to express political opinions. They retain their American citizenship. During the Trop v. Dulles case in 1958, Justice Earl Warren wrote, "Citizenship is not a right that expires upon misbehavior." Incarcerated people have the freedom of speech but are denied the ability to speak through the casting of a vote. This creates a growing population of people who become subject to laws that they never have an ability to speak against. Also, small towns that have federal or private prisons count incarcerated citizens as part of their population every census. This prison-based gerrymandering gives more political influence to politicians that benefit from more caged humans. These citizens who are counted but cannot vote are mostly removed from metropolitan, poverty-stricken areas. As Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist and economist Chris Hedges suggests, once rights become privileges, none of us are safe.

RE: Testimony in Support of HB 847, HB 790, HB 617 Dear members of the House Corrections and Public Institutions Committee: The Missouri Voter Protection Coalition (MOVPC) submits this testimony in support of HB 847, HB 790 (and HB 617), which would restore voting rights to Missourians on probation or parole for prior felony convictions. This is a much needed reform with proven impacts on reducing recidivism and promoting positive reentry and citizenship. The majority of states allow those on probation or parole to vote. Currently, Missourians are not eligible to vote during any period of incarceration, as well as during any period of probation or parole for a felony conviction. This would restore voting rights upon completion of their term of incarceration for a felony (except for crimes associated with right of suffrage). Nationwide, 4.6 million people - one in 50 Americans of voting age - are disenfranchised due to a felony conviction in their past. And more than 75% of people who can't vote due to a criminal record are not incarcerated, but living in our communities, having completed their sentences, or while being on probation or parole. These people are working and paying taxes, yet they have no voice in their government. In Missouri, there are approximately 60,000 individuals on probation and parole. Voters of color are significantly disproportionately impacted. One in 19 African Americans of voting age is disenfranchised due to a felony - a rate 3.5 times that of non-African Americans. Among the adult African American population, 5.3 percent is disenfranchised compared to 1.5 percent of the adult non-African American population. Studies unilaterally confirm that voting while on probation and parole reduces recidivism. States that allow voting by those on probation and parole have lower recidivism rates, and more positive re-entry experiences. Why? Voting encourages engagement and participation. It gives people a stake in their communities. This is one reason many states are moving towards restoring voting rights for those on probation and parole. Since 1997, 26 states and the District of Columbia have guaranteed voting rights to people living with felony convictions in their past. As a result, over 2 million Americans have regained their fundamental right to vote, and are contributing members of their communities. Since 2020, more than 8 states have changed their laws to provide for voting rights after incarceration. Missouri should join this list by allowing people to vote once they have completed their sentence of incarceration, and allow those on probation and parole to register to vote. Accordingly, we urge this committee to Support HB 847, HB 790 (and HB 617).

I support restoring voting rights to citizens on probation or parole. These individuals have served their court ordered punishment and are expected to be working, contributing, taxpaying members of society while on probation or parole. There is no reason to deprive them of the right to vote. Restricting this right is extrajudicial punishment. It should be our goal to reintegrate these folks, not ostracize them by disenfranchisement. Thank you.

Please vote for the passage of House Bill 790. The restoration of voting rights to formerly incarcerated Missourians is essential in returning them to being full participants in our republic. It is important that people convicted of a crime who have served their sentence regard themselves – and that we regard them -- as having a clean slate when they have been released back into society.

This would restore the right to vote to ex-felons who have completed their prison sentences and are still on probation or parole but are living in our communities, working and paying taxes. Studies have shown that restoring the right to vote lowers recidivism. The League of Women Voters of Missouri supports this bill.

Our vote is our voice. Missouri will be a stronger, more loving community if we welcome all voices. Citizens of a democracy have the right to vote. We need not fear the voices (the votes) of our fellow citizens who served their time for a crime committed. Casting a vote is a peaceful act. As a poll worker for many years, I have witnessed the satisfaction and pride people express as they cast their vote. It is an honorable act. Let us be a more loving community and restore the right to vote to our fellow citizens as they return to the community after paying the price for their crimes in prison.

Suffrage has been shown to reduce recidivism by allowing meaningful participation in one’s community. Missouri should join many other states that open voting to anyone not convicted of a voting-related offense once they have served their sentence. Thank you

My name is Rosalyn Jackson. I live in St. Louis City, O'Fallon community. As a parent who had an incarcerated son, as a friend to many other parents who did and still do, and as an affiliate of Mothers of Incarcerated Sons and Daughters, (MISD); I've found it imperative to be able to know that my son and all of the other families' relatives were being treated fairly in spite of their criminal status. There must be oversight from outside parties/entities whose interest is to make the process of transitioning back into society as smooth as possible. When inmates are abused inside of prisons and do not receive the mental support and other medical attention they need, they return to their communities often worse than when they began serving time. We must protect them and those who are employed to ensure their time incarcerated is beneficial for all (and not just profit for the penal businesses). Thank you!

I applaud Members of the Missouri House of Representatives for working across the aisle to restore voting rights to citizens who are on parole after having been held accountable for their crimes and done their time, and to those who were not incarcerated and are under state supervision/on probation. Being able to vote, to participate in the civic life of their communities while working and paying taxes and trying to stay on the straight-and-narrow, has been shown to reduce recidivism and benefits us all.

After someone has served time in prison, it is best for them and for society at large to do everything possible to be restore the formerly incarcerated to full citizenship with a stake in their communities. If we truly have a “department of corrections” (and not merely a system of punishment and revenge) then it is our duty to restore voting rights to citizens on parole or probation.

People that commit crimes against society forfeit any say on how society is run. This bill supports having offenders vote on amendments etc., that could benefit them if they are repeat offenders. They should not have a say in anything until they have paid their dues in full.
